

2023 VWD Course Travel Award

Yazan Abou-Ismael, MD

Assistant Professor
University of Utah

Dr. Yazan Abou-Ismael is an Assistant Professor of Medicine at the University of Utah and practicing as a classical hematologist with clinical focus on disorders of thrombosis and hemostasis. He is associate program director of the hematology/oncology fellowship at the University of Utah. His specific disease interests include von Willebrand disease, rare bleeding disorders, and thrombotic microangiopathies such as thrombotic thrombocytopenic purpura. Primarily a clinician, he is also committed to research in hemostasis and thrombosis. While he has authored 22 peer-reviewed publications to date in top-tier hematology journals, he also has a special interest in medical illustration with many illustrations published in various medical journals.