The University of Cincinnati

- Medical Director of Adult Hemophilia Treatment Center and a faculty Benign Hematologist

The University of Cincinnati, College of Medicine, Department of Internal Medicine, Division of Hematology and Oncology and the Adult Hemophilia Treatment Center are seeking hematology board eligible or certified applicants at the Assistant or Associate Professor level for faculty and leadership roles. Candidates should have an interest in benign hematology with a focus on Thrombosis and Hemostasis. Faculty appointments will be commensurate with experience and will be considered for the inaugural Joseph Palascak Endowed Chair in Thrombosis and Hemostasis.

The University of Cincinnati Hemophilia Treatment Center has a thriving clinic serving a population of over 350 patients with inherited bleeding disorders and over 1500 patients with thrombotic and other benign hematological disorders. The Division also has an active hematology consult service at the University Hospital and serves as a referral center for the Tri-State region. Ample opportunities exist for access to resources in immunobiology, laboratory medicine, transfusion medicine, cell mediated therapy and cancer biology at the University of Cincinnati Medical College, the Hoxworth Blood Center or the Cincinnati Children’s Hospital Medical Center.

In addition to a robust, existing patient base, the Adult Hemophilia Treatment Center has a dedicated social worker and two dedicated mid-level providers. Substantial research collaborations exist with Cincinnati Children’s Hospital, the third largest children’s hospital in the country. The Center enjoys relationships with outstanding pathologists, orthopedic and vascular surgeons, dentists and other related healthcare services for their growing patient population.

Incoming faculty will enjoy very competitive salary and benefits and mid-career candidates will have the opportunity to take over for the retiring Medical Director. Resources exist for basic, clinical, or translational research as well as teaching opportunities at all levels.

Candidates interested in the position must submit an inquiry through Merritt Hawkins and Associates to be considered.
